Send to Friend MalwareLamb As any father of a one-year-old child can affirm, there's nothing as mysterious as a baby's smile. That is exactly what makes the procedure of finding out what makes one's newborn so unique so clever -- and that's exactly what other researchers around the globe are trying to do with a different method: they're creating databases of newborns' faces. And the project, called Face Genome Project, has blown up this past year. Face Genome Project What is EDDB? This is the archive of the email address you have provided in the other email.
