Detection of herpes simplex virus 1 and 2 in human genital tract and urine with the use of ligase chain reaction. We used the ligase chain reaction (LCR) method to study the involvement of herpes simplex virus (HSV) in human urogenital tract infections. DNA was extracted from specimens of the tonsils, vaginal mucosa, cerebrospinal fluid (CSF), and urine using the guanidine isothiocyanate method. The LCR method was carried out on a Hu-MuLV polyclonal DNA control (ICN, Coralville, Iowa), HSV2- and HSV1-specific primers, and polymerase chain reaction (PCR) products were distinguished by hybridization with a 125I-labelled oligonucleotide specific for the probe (ICN). The oligonucleotide was bound to a nylon membrane (Hybond N+; Amersham, Little Chalfont, Buckinghamshire, England). The PCR products from HSV-specific primers were hybridized to the probe; HSV1 and HSV2 sequences were detected in all specimens tested. The DNA from the tonsils in a patient with peritonsillar abscess was amplified in a single, very weak reaction. The results indicate that HSV is present in the majority of samples collected from the urogenital tract of patients.
