Usage and control of individual account's settings Magic Mail Monitor has a clear and user-friendly graphical interface. It offers three main sections: Preferences, Settings and Settings Manager. First of all, you must enable POP3 servers, which are usually used to receive emails. If the first option doesn't work well, try the second one or the third. The Preferences dialog box gives you a list of available email accounts. These are preconfigured and you'll only have to specify a user name and password for one of them. It also provides you with a list of preconfigured email filters. You can add more email filters and use them for your accounts. Settings Manager is your main window where you can specify what you need. You can apply labels, hide accounts, set the application to run on startup or create new accounts. And the coolest feature is probably the notifier, which pops up an info icon that notifies you about new messages in a specific folder.
