We are not responsible for any loss, misuse or damage caused by using this site. We are installing new bathroom faucets in our master bath. We purchased Schumacher's Direct Set valves and I've read that it's important to use the recommended gaskets and packing (sponge is discouraged) when installing these valves. Schumacher suggests the PAE (Parker) ceramic gasket as well. I've looked at the PAE gasket that came with the valves and it is packaged in plastic with a sponge. I've looked at the inserts that Schumacher uses in their valves (not different from the insert that I've purchased) and the sponge fits nicely in one of the holes to keep the threads clean and clear. It appears that the sponge insert is held in place by thread pins. So the question for you faithful is: do you use a sponge for the packing for your valves or do you use a "sponge" from the gasket company? A spongy material is only an aid to assembly, and should not be used as actual packing material. Any loosely packed "sponge" packing (such as a cork-like material) is OK as long as there is no bleeding of any sealants around the threads. It is a good idea to pre-clean the threads of the valve body and threads of any O-rings to reduce the possibility of any cross-contamination. I don't like any material that doesn't "fit" in the end of a threaded fitting. I use a cork or other sponge like material that's sized the same size as the packing pin. I use the gasket material to install the packing pin and then discard the material. A few years ago I tried to use just the sponge and it didn't work. It was messy to work with so I went back to the sponge/sponge like material. Now the only time I use a "sponge" is to remove a connector that's

To investigate the efficacy and safety of Traditional Chinese medicine (TCM) in treatment of differentiation of TCM in the treatment of miscarriage. Randomized controlled trial. 85 patients with pregnancy loss during the period of 5-13 weeks were divided randomly into two groups. The observation group (n = 44) was treated with TCM plus conventional treatment, and the control group (n = 41) was given the conventional treatment. The total effective rate, obvious clinical effect rate, cure rate, recovery rate, abortion rate, abortion time, adverse reaction rate of the treatment groups were analyzed. Blood routine examination, hepatic and renal function test were carried out at the 7th and 14th days after treatment. The total effective rate was 83.2% (37/44), the obvious clinical effect rate was 81.8% (37/44), the cure rate was 78.6% (36/44) and the recovery rate was 75.0% (34/44) in the observation group, while were 76.9% (31/41), 68.3% (28/41), 72.5% (31/43), and 65.9% (28/43) in the control group, respectively. The abortion time of the observation group was (13.48 +/- 3.94) days, significantly shorter than that of (17.36 +/- 4.12) days of the control group (P Acute cardiogenic pulmonary edema after neck surgery. Pulmonary edema rarely occurs in the immediate postoperative period after common head and neck surgeries. We report a case of acute cardiogenic pulmonary edema occurring after a thyroidectomy in a patient who was pretreated with intravenous prostaglandin E1.
